

34th EDITION

AMC 2017 | ADVANCED METALLIZATION CONFERENCE

September 13-14, 2017

WEST PICKLE RESEARCH CENTER | AUSTIN, TEXAS

SPONSORSHIP PROSPECTUS

The 34th annual Advanced Metallization Conference (AMC) will be held at the University of Texas Pickle West Research Campus in Austin, Texas September 13-14, 2017.

Since its inception as the Tungsten Workshop in 1984, AMC has served as the leading conference for the interconnect and contact metallization communities, and has remained at the leading edge of the development of tungsten, aluminum, and copper/low-K interconnects. As the semiconductor industry evolves, exciting new challenges in metallization are emerging, particularly in the areas of contacts to advanced devices, local interconnect solutions for highly-scaled devices, advanced memory device metallization, and 3D/packaging technology. While the conference content has evolved, the unique workshop environment of AMC fosters an open discussion and creates opportunities for cross-pollination between academia and industry.

AMC Workshop Environment encourages open discussion with:

- Strong academic and industry participation,
- Single session conference talks
- Extended breaks and social events for networking,
- Oral poster-preview introductions prior to poster session, and
- Extended duration for talks and extended time for discussion (new for 2015)
- Special exhibits by conference sponsors

Conference Scope

Submissions are encouraged covering materials, process, integration and reliability challenges spanning a wide range of topics in metallization for interconnect/contact applications, especially in the areas of:

- Contacts to novel devices (Finfet, Nanowire, III/V, and 2D materials),
- Highly-scaled local and global interconnects,
- Interconnect and device reliability,
- Advanced memory (NAND/DRAM, 3D NAND, STT and RRAM),
- 3D and packaging (monolithic 3D, TSV, EMI), and
- Novel and emerging interconnects.
